The Fog of War.

Strange things happen in a war. One man a few weeks' service gets a silver badge, which is denied a "time" man, has been many times more

In France, man after a week's service Gibraltar got blue chevrons which are due to the man who has fought Zulu and Goshawk for at least four years. A tribunal specially summoned the man to London to receive his chevrons without delay. The Admiralty Office devised for the Anzac troops a similar system, which was applied to incomparable Regulars (and to a few cases), having already been given to the M.M.s. The Admiralty were, went through the worst horrors of the Dardanelles. Some of these were decorated with the Victoria Cross and Dardanelles throughout. One of them, neither the 1914 Star nor the Gallipoli Medal, was awarded him. He received it with a gratuity of £20, which is the reward of the recipient of the M.M., the wife of the M.C. can get additional honours; the M.M. winner gets nothing more; the M.C. can, by declining honours, are in future to be considered as brave under fire—but simultaneously

INFATUATION FOR

ENGLISHWOMAN'S LOVE LETTERS.

Remarkable letters written by the young wife of a Wadhurst prisoner to a Hun prisoner of war were read last night at the Grosvenor police court, when Miss Lorraine Goss, of the Railway Hotel, Wadhurst, was charged with conveying to the German prisoner "Hermann" unendorsed letters and packets of cigarettes. She admitted having written and spoken to the German—Mr. Donne, prosecuting, said the woman had written without the knowledge of her husband letters of an impassioned nature. She admitted having written to him to corrupt a corporal of the guard in order to obtain £10s. for the delivery of each letter. She endeavoured to make an appointment to see this German and conveyed to him cigarettes—Mr. Donne read several before writing to "Hermann." The first commenced "My dearest boy, and expressed regret that she disappointed him the previous evening. In another she wrote: "I have been thinking of you and never realised what true love was so much before. On Tuesday morning I received your letter, which I have not deserted you, and I am never it now. Please don't write again so angry with

"E. T.," observed Mr. Donne, he was told, was meant for "English Tomatoes."

"I Long for an Extra Hug."

Another letter began:—

"Dearest L.—Can I thank you enough for the letter of the 17th? I enjoyed what true love and affection was. Patience is what we must have. . . . How I long for an opportunity to tell you how much I am explaining to him where it is, so if you carefully seal the envelope he will send it on to me.—From your devoted and affectionate friend, E. T. D."

Another letter ran: "Darling Hermann,—Thank you so much for your beautiful letter of the 17th. I am glad it was brought to me." The rest of the letter, remarked Mr. Donne was apparently immaterial to the case, except that in it she looked forward to the time when she would be the wife of her war could be husband and wife, in another letter defendant referred to her friend "Gwen," who also was acquainted with the defendant as a prisoner, and added:—

"E. T. need, I think, favour us. I always give him a lift, note for delivering letters to him, and I am always willing to take them for him."

Another letter ended, "Ever yours Betty," and in another defendant wrote:—

"Please tell me if you prefer tobacco or cigarettes, or will have both, as yours are all the same. I will get you what I like. What I have for you I give to "E. T." Don't speak to the others about it, otherwise it might cause some trouble. In the letter written by defendant she said:—"A few lines will enable Betty to still keep confidence in her love."

"He Wants Whisky."

Mr. Donne said the German apparently replied to the letters, but only I was available. The letter ran:—

like. I am working alone at the other end of the tunnel opposite the station. I will be very glad to see you. I have a bottle of whisky for me. I have had nothing of it for a long time. The proper and the clock in the afternoon. Dear Miss, I hope to have the pleasure of seeing you again—Yours very sincerely, Miss Giff.

The whole of the letters he had read to the Bench, continued Mr. Donne, were discovered secreted in a pillbox which came from the particular camp in which this German prisoner was confined. The discovery was made by a soldier, who gave information to the police.—One witness said Mrs. Giff came from the window and saw her from the window and told him to take them to the fair-haired boy, who was with the other prisoners. The man came to him and took the cigarettes. The letter was written on the day that when he asked Mrs. Giff if he wrote the letters she said, "No, certainly not." He went inside to take a statement, and asked Mrs. Giff was in the letter. She replied "No, I would not do for him to see those letters." Afterwards she admitted that she wrote the letters, and that she gave one of the guards various letters. The Bench considered it a very serious offence, and sentenced Mrs. Giff to 3 months' hard labour.

...miles from the important junction of Chaunay. His troops had fought their way into the western out-kirts of Biézacourt, across the Ailette and miles south of Chaunay, and reached the village of Praast and Champs, south of Chaunay. With the Americans they captured Juvigny, north of Soissons, which is of great importance, as the place is on the heights north of the Ailette and a gateway to the Champagne. De Dames ridge, behind the German army standing on the Vesle. Mangin's progress thus enables him to threaten the flank of the German position along the Somme. upon which separation allowances are or should be based?

1. To maintain the fighting man's home during his absence and his country's service.
2. To maintain the health and comfort of his wife and children and their dependance.
3. To secure the vital needs of such dependents do not suffer by reason of any rise in the cost of living and the necessities occasioned by the war.

It is further obvious that these things must be done in order to maintain the morale and contentment of the absent fighting men. In his long ordeal out there he must not be hampered by any anxiety as to the

Prior to this war the allowance for the childless wife was 11s. 1d. per week; and now, after a year of war, accompanied by a phenomenal rise in the cost of almost every necessity, her personal allowance stands at 19s. 2d.—a rise of 1s. 5d. per week, which was granted as far back as October, 1914.

The Government, last September, paid the soldier's allotment of 10s. a day, but surely that only meant that the Government had at last made the 12s. 6d. real and had ceased to tax the soldier for the same, in view of the fact that the soldier, like other sections of the community, was suffering one thing, when the husbands are living at home they do not get the benefit of the ration allowance of 250 Id. a day, which is paid to the single man in like circumstances, even though it is often to the Government's interest that the man in question live at home and thereby be able to expense in getting from his home to his military office and back again. Secondly, the children's allowances do not work out at all satisfactorily under this scheme, and I have particular cause to regret the first of these, instead of receiving 7s. a week, is only the woman with 2 children— not a penny beyond that 4s. for the woman with 22. How can any reasonable man be in such a position as that?

It bristles with anomalies, but it plainly shows that the extra allowance comes under these circumstances a children's allowance at all. It is not a woman's allowance. It has two unfortunate faults, however; it creates, firstly, a strange position that the only child of a soldier who is living receives 60s., whereas the only child of the soldier who has been killed in action receives 40s. It creates, secondly, a child, which may be a babe-in-arm

"'hot-upkeep' allowance, it was also he paid to all childless wives are for the infirm or above the age of 45. In any case, since the wife of a soldier may receive an additional $1.3d. per week for her pension of maintaining the age of 45, some special concession should be extended to childless soldier's wife above that age. The wife of a soldier who is over the latter receives only 12d. per week, while the former receives 18d. Indeed, there are far too many discrepancies between the pensioners' separation allowances, and for the classes of cases a new system, simple and standard, and more uniform, is badly needed."

Christmas, 1917, defendant made the acquaintance of Rbt. Anderson, and it was alleged that during a period of several months the 2 men were in the habit of meeting each other at frequent intervals and indulging in certain practices. Defendant frequently entertained Anderson at the Carlton Hotel and other places, and furnished him with money to the extent of $23 and $210.80. Defendant Anderson gave evidence and the hearing was adjourned, defendant being admitted to bail.

...the hospital. For months I was in a kidney hospital with nephritis (kidney trouble). I had to live long hours when I fell ill, and I was able to bed after I got up but I could hardly go on because the trouble was at its peak. A great pain. Food would not come to bed. After a few days were in a shocking state I could not sleep, either, and I was unable to get up and facing before my eyes. I thought I could not live long forever, in the end I tried to get up and I found myself doing me good. I finally, got back my strength, and am so well that I am able to work.
